Q.1. Read the following passage:
There once lived a poor tailor who had a son called Aladdin. Aladdin was a careless, lazy boy who played all day in the streets. Aladdin's father was very sad that his son did not work. He had even asked the Sultan to talk to Aladdin and tell him to work, but not even a lecture from the Sultan made Aladdin change his ways. The poor tailor died one day, without ever fulfilling his wish of seeing his son do an honest day's work. One day, when Aladdin was playing in the streets as usual, a stranger asked him his age, and if he was the son of Mustafa, the tailor.
"I am sir", replied Aladdin, "but he died some months ago."
The stranger, who was a famous African Magician, cried when he heard this. He kissed Aladdin saying, "I am your uncle, and knew you because you look like my brother. Go to your mother and tell her I am coming."
Aladdin ran home and told his mother of his new found uncle. "Indeed, child," She said, "your father had a brother, but I always thought he was dead." She made a delicious dinner for him and they all ate it happily.
